I suppose it was inevitable that as my word-base broadened, I could for the first time pick up a book and read and now begin to understand what the book was saying. Anyone who has read a great deal can imagine the new world that opened. Let me tell you something; from then until I left that prison, in every free moment I had, if I was not reading in the library, I was reading on my bunk. I read more in my room than in the library itself. An inmate who was known to read a lot could check out more than the permitted maximum number of books. When I had progressed to really serious reading, every night at about 10 p. m. I would be outraged with the "lights out". It always seemed to catch me right in the middle of something engrossing. Yet even after dark I used to read in the glow of the corridor light.

(Good Luck)
