

Research Plan of Woman's Health and Midwifery Nursing Department (2025-2029)

General Objectives of the Research Plan	Research Areas	Problems / Issues	Performance Indicators	Time Frame	Responsible for Implementation and Follow-Up
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ Conducting research that focuses on reducing maternal and neonatal morbidity and mortality through better antenatal, perinatal, and postnatal care practices. ▪ Enhancing knowledge and practices related to family planning, contraception, and safe motherhood. ▪ Evaluating and improving midwifery care models to ensure they are culturally sensitive, patient-centered, and based on the latest research. 	Specialization in Woman's Health and Midwifery.	Conducting research studies aimed at: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ Improving women's health at different stages of life, reducing the rate of maternal mortality, combating infectious diseases, and ensuring the quality of healthcare provided to mothers. ▪ Combating violence against women in its various forms and promoting equality and non-discrimination between genders. ▪ Understanding the impact of climate change on reproductive health among females and enhancing the ability to face and adapt to the risks of climate change. ▪ Creating and developing curricula, programs, and teaching methods in the field of women's health and obstetric nursing. ▪ Enhancing the use of information and communication technology to promote women's health. ▪ Using complementary and alternative therapy practices to enhance women's health. ▪ Utilizing evidence-based practices related to women's health and obstetric nursing. 	The commitment of faculty members to the topics of the department's research plan.	2025/ 2029	Postgraduate students, faculty members of the department, and the scientific department council.

Postgraduate Coordinators

Head of the Department

Assist Prof. Nadia Youssef

Prof. Hanan Mohamed El-Sayed

Assist Prof. Rania El-Kurdy